Winter Not Yet Obsolete.

This paper recently had something to say on the question of whether the New England winter is as severe now as it was fifty or more years ago. It is a question that is more or less discussed every winter, many maintaining that the season is less rigorous than formerly while others assert that there has been no perceptible change in the climate and that winter is still just about what it always has been. This is claimed by those who base their contentions on records, and it will have to be admitted that records are a much safer guide than memory, which in the case of most people is decidedly faulty, particularly with reference to weather conditions. We not infrequently hear heated arguments over weather conditions of only a few months or years ago, all of which goes to show that the memory of the average person, especially in connection with this topic, is not to be relied upon.

But, whatever one's opinion regarding changes in the climate, the people of New England have just had a striking reminder that the old-fashioned winter is not altogether a thing of the past. The present winter has lived pretty close up to the standards of other days from the beginning. January made a record for cold and winter did not lose much time in December. And the recent great storm will prevent February from being at all sure, even if its remaining days bring forth nothing unusual in the weather line.

The storm was one of great severity, being in most parts of New England and some other eastern sections the worst in recent years. There was a heavy fall of snow accompanied by high winds, and the result was the worst interference with transportation that has been experienced in a long time. Railroad schedules were demoralized and trolley traffic was completely tied up in many places, and very irregular everywhere in the territory covered by the storm. Country roads were entirely obliterated in many sections and there was a general slowing down of business and traffic in the storm-swept area.

While such storms are practically the same as those experienced fifty and one hundred years ago, the effects are very different now from what they were then. In the old days most of the traveling was done with teams, and when the roads were blocked the people accepted the situation as a matter of course and contented themselves as best they could until they could dig out.

But conditions are very different today. The world it might be said, now moves on wheels. In getting from one place to another the great majority of the people depend upon the railroads, the trolley lines and the automobile, and when for any reason the wheels stop turning there is trouble. For these reasons such a storm as that of last week means more than it did in the days of old. It means not only serious interruption of traffic, but tremendous costs to transportation companies, which in addition to losses of business are obliged to expend great sums in restoring conditions to normal, and after the money is all spent there is not a thing to show for it. They are no better off than they were before.

Nevertheless, this is one of the conditions of life for which there is no remedy. We cannot control the weather, no matter how much we talk about it, and our only recourse is to "take it as it comes," as we are so often reminded that we must, and make the best of it.

The expenditure of $120,000 on the county buildings at Auburn, Me., has been postponed on account of the "excessive cost of materials and labor." If such action were to become general it might do more toward bringing down prices than all the talk that is being indulged in.

Blandford, a little mountain town in Massachusetts, is talking of creating a subsidy to induce a physician to locate there. In the larger towns the people who employ the doctors have to do the "subsidizing."

The pins continue to be knocked from under the mourners of John Barleycorn. The Supreme Court of Colorado decides that the ratification of the prohibition amendment by the Legislature without a referendum vote was strictly legal.

But there is no law against the use of the old terms, as is instanced by a certain brand of ginger ale that is advertised as "aged and mellowed." Yum, yum.

Secretary Glass wants $2,000,000 with which to prevent the smuggling of liquor into the country. Why not use the funds that have been necessary in running the jails, which are said to be rapidly going out of business?

It is reported from Washington that rural mail carriers are resigning in considerable numbers because of insufficient pay, and the claim is made that they are not receiving as much as farm laborers. But has any one noticed a rush of these men after jobs on the farms?

Conditions are more comfortable in Boston now that the freight handlers have gone back to work. May the time soon come when an armistice will be declared in the industrial war.

Is spunky little Rhode Island preparing to give up the ghost? One of the biggest breweries in the state is preparing to convert itself into a refinery of sugars and syrups.

THE HERALD'S
CONTEST

The Army School Essay Contest, which takes place on February 20th, in all the schools of the United States on the subject, "What Are the Honors of an Enlistment in the United States Army," has aroused such nation wide interest, that thousands of letters are being received at Washington and New York, requesting information on the subject.

Due to the short length of time before the contest takes place all pupils, their parents or teachers who desire information of any kind about the Essay Contest should address their inquiries to U. S. Army Recruiting Station, 463 Congress street, Portland, Maine, where the army officials will be delighted to furnish all information requested.

JUNIOR CIRCLE
AND SOCIAL

The Junior Circle's Daughters of the Baptist church held a meeting on Monday evening in the chapel, Mrs. James O. Pettigrew, the leader, presiding. A business session was held and it was planned to give a Silver Tea on Thursday afternoon from three to five o'clock in the chapel. The Junior order throughout the state adopted a French orphan some time ago and each Circle pledged a sum of money toward its support. The Juniors received an invitation from the Sunday school class of Sydney Road for a Washington's Birthday party in the chapel on Feb. 22. Following the business session a treat of pop corn brittle and chocolate was served and music and games occupied the remainder of the evening.

The Junior Circle is called the King's Jewels and it has done commendable work for such a young organization since it was started. At Christmas it presented a very pretty quilt to the Children's Home at Nisqually, this having been made by the members of this Circle.

Its officers are as follows:
President—Ruth Yeaton.
Vice president—Ruth Emery.
Secretary—Vesta Splinsky.
Treasurer—Madeline Wessellhoff.

NAVY YARD NOTES

Going to West Coast
The collier Jason is scheduled to take a cargo of supplies from the Charlestown yard to the west coast for the Pacific fleet.

Must Be Careful
The department has sent out letters to the yards and stations in regard to the handling of gasoline. The letter says on account of the recent frequent explosions and fires on submarines it is believed that the hazards on board all vessels using gasoline are not sufficiently understood and requesting that special notice be paid to the letters that have been sent out on the subject.

Opening Game Tonight
The opening game in the series of basketball games between different ships and marines will be played in the Portsmouth armory beginning tonight at 7.30. The Huntington will meet the Striding and the marine barracks will have it out with the Eagle boat No. 48. The Gridley and Eagle No. 2 made up the other teams to take part in the series covering a period of seven weeks.

Still at Large

No trace of the three men who escaped from the Charlestown yard brig on Friday last has been discovered. The yard officers got several tips on the men but nothing came of any of them.

Two More Deaths

Two more deaths from influenza among the enlisted men occurred at the local yard hospital early this morning. The deceased are C. W. Platt, a fireman on the destroyer Isaac, and H. F. Ludwell, fireman, attached to the destroyer Fairfax.

Will Move to Washington

The navy food inspection office which has been located at Chicago during the war, will be transferred on March 1 to the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture, at Washington.

LINCOLNISM VS. BOLSHEVISM

Thyron Church's "Talk of the Day" in the Philadelphia Press.

Lincoln's birthday, Thursday, will have a larger significance than any other anniversary of February 12 in the 111 years since he was born.

The Lincoln child of this city made a suggestion that in Lincoln's life is found the most powerful antidote for the poison of Bolshevism. And so it was urged that the states call special attention to Lincoln and what he stood for.

What thought has grown into an important movement, according to W. J. Conlin, a former president of the Lincoln club, "The governors of ten states have when their endorsement of the plan and promised to issue special proclamations accordingly."

The states are Arizona, New Mexico, Indiana, Rhode Island, Idaho, Wisconsin, Kentucky, Colorado, Wyoming and West Virginia.

Most people will agree that Lincoln was not only America's in the world's foremost Commander, the road from a lower to a higher plane by the use of his own industry and supreme talents.

Nobody now has a new story of Lincoln. Every one has been told. But a lawyer who marks with the best of admirably attorneys tells a curious thing about Lincoln as a lawyer.

He was an inland attorney—a fresh water member of the Illinois bar. Yet, Lincoln argued an admirably case, which the Philadelphia lawyer says is one of the American classics in that branch of law.

No, indeed, Bolshevism cannot slay before the flag of all American patriotism—the boy Lincoln flag on the barn floor before the blazing pine knots on the hearth. Nothing is ready when his time came.

3 LOSE LIVES
IN MERRIMAC

Boat Overturned in Strong Current.

(By Associated Press)
Manchester, N. H., Feb. 10.—Two men and one woman were drowned here this morning in attempting to cross the partly frozen Merrimack river in South Manchester by boat, breaking the ice ahead of them with a pole. A fourth occupant of the boat was saved when he managed to cling to the boat displaced by the strong current. The four were brothers and sisters, Daniel, Thomas Jr., Nellie and John Stewart, who lived at 577 South Main St., West Manchester. John Stewart who was injured was breaking the ice when the accident occurred, the water running through a channel at that point very swiftly preventing the river from freezing over entirely except in extremely cold weather. The party was on the way to their work at the W. H. McElwain Shoe Co., Central plant, on the East side of the river. There being no bridge in the southern part of the city, it has been common practice for many of the McElwain workers to thus cross the river to their work each day. The Stewart brothers come from a large family and four of them including the three in the accident today, served meritiously with the American and British forces during the war.

CHARACTER
IN U. S. A.

To the man who enters the United States army the question immediately arises—Who will my associates be and what will we do to amuse ourselves in our leisure time?

Like the youth who enters a preparatory school or college, a stranger, a recruit in the army must choose his friends and define a policy himself. He is confronted, in all probability by youths on the one side, who can see no other way of spending their leisure than to go to town and either walk the streets or seek out a public dance or theatre to attend. On the other hand his acquaintances will number among them, the type of youth who prefers to spend his evenings and his week-end in writing letters to beloved ones at home, or in reading.

The U. S. army bends every effort to induce our soldiers to build and to shape their ideals in accordance with the principles of the youth mentioned in the second class above. To further these ideals all available opportunities are put before the men to let their minds and thoughts be guided into such clear and forceful channels.

That men may not lack spiritual guidance, a chaplain's corps has been formed, with chaplains of all denominations in each regimental or corresponding organization. Their functions include holding services of Sabbaths, assisting as instructors in our schools, and in giving advice to the men on all personal subjects.

Surely companionship with men who have solid ideals, fair play, true sportsmanship, courtesy, and civility as outlined above can do nothing, except to build solid characters into the fabrication of our soldiers' sons.

BOLSHEVIKI
WARSHIPS

(By Associated Press)
London, Feb. 10.—Referring to the situation at Odessa a Bolsheviki communiqué received by wireless from Moscow says: "In Odessa our troops were stopped temporarily by the fire of warships and artillery which was particularly fierce in the streets. Armored cars were used and field artillery fired point blank. The enemy was finally driven from the town, on Sunday."

GERMANY NAMES
ALLIED VIOLATORS

(By Associated Press)
Berlin, Feb. 10.—Germany is preparing a list containing the names of allied soldiers and high officials who are accused by the Berlin government of violation of the laws of war and being to submit it as a counter-proposal to the demands of the allies for extradition of Germans who are alleged to be war criminals. This list is in the course of compilation and it is expected it will be ready for publication and delivery shortly. It will contain specific indictments based upon alleged authenticated material which is on file in the German archives. It was stated tonight Germany, however, would not demand extradition of the men named in these indictments.

CATHOLIC CHURCH NOTES

An anniversary high mass of requiem will be celebrated on Wednesday morning at eight o'clock at the Church of the Immaculate Conception for the repose of the soul of Mrs. Helen Walsh Carter.

The three night bazaar, which opens this evening, at the Parochial school building for the relief fund of Catholic clergy in France, bids fair to be a big attraction and throng will attend. The committee has been very active in arranging for the bazaar and the school hall presents an attractive appearance with its gaily decorated booths. An entertainment is to be given each evening by the children which is sure to please. Wednesday afternoon will be especially for the children, who will be admitted free from 2 to 5 o'clock.

SLEIGH RIDE AND DANCE

The O. T. and the Half and Half clubs enjoyed a sleigh ride to Newington on Monday night where a dance was held at the Town hall. It was a merry party and every one enjoyed the entire evening.

TOO MUCH BONE, SUET AND FAT IN GOBS' FEED

Navy to Purchase No More Hamburger for Ships and Shore Stations.

In the future when the enlisted men of the navy eat hamburger steak, it must be the real thing according to the bureau of supplies and accounts. For some time past the mess has been complaining that this variety of chopped up steak has contained more or less suet, bone and fat. Now, a blue-jacket in some epicurean mood cannot be fooled on the eats on his ship or ashore.

In the future, according to the bureau of supplies and accounts of the navy department, no more steak, "hamburger style," will be purchased as part of the daily menu for Uncle Sam's men from contractors.

When the present contracts run out, the ship's cooks and other culinary artists of the ship's galley squad will prepare all the meat that comes under the heading of hamburger.

BOSTON BEING SNOWED IN AGAIN

(By Associated Press)

Boston, Feb. 10.—Still snowing to get clear of last week's snow this city was visited by another storm today. The snow was light but fell steadily for several hours with the Weather Bureau predicting continued precipitation of either snow or rain. The New Haven railroad faced the new snow blanket without having cleared several of its lines of the old but the Boston and Maine and Boston and Albany roads reported that they were ready for a fresh start with normal service prevailing.

MUST TAKE HIS FINGER PRINTS WHEN IN DOUBT

Navy Department to Take No Chances of Forgery in Future.

Several bad pay checks are said to be in the hands of the navy department, due to forgery, especially during the war period. This has led to much activity in the pay corps and resulted in the issue of an order from the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts which directs that in the future when pay officers have any doubt as to the man who signs a pay check, it shall be their duty to take finger prints of the hand which is used in the signing of the check.

The order calls for good prints of four fingers which will be retained by the pay officer and a duplicate forwarded to the bureau at Washington.

Winter Not Yet Obsolete.

This paper recently had something to say on the question of whether the New England winter is as severe now as it was fifty or more years ago. It is a question that is more or less discussed every winter, many maintaining that the season is less rigorous than formerly while others assert that there has been no perceptible change in the climate and that winter is still just about what it always has been. This is claimed by those who base their contentions on records, and it will have to be admitted that records are a much safer guide than memory, which in the case of most people is decidedly faulty, particularly with reference to weather conditions. We not infrequently hear heated arguments over weather conditions of only a few months or years ago, all of which goes to show that the memory of the average person, especially in connection with this topic, is not to be relied upon.

But, whatever one's opinion regarding changes in the climate, the people of New England have just had a striking reminder that the old-fashioned winter is not altogether a thing of the past. The present winter has lived pretty close up to the standards of other days from the beginning. January made a record for cold and winter did not lose much time in December. And the recent great storm will prevent February from being at all sure, even if its remaining days bring forth nothing unusual in the weather line.

The storm was one of great severity, being in most parts of New England and some other eastern sections the worst in recent years. There was a heavy fall of snow accompanied by high winds, and the result was the worst interference with transportation that has been experienced in a long time. Railroad schedules were demoralized and trolley traffic was completely tied up in many places, and very irregular everywhere in the territory covered by the storm. Country roads were entirely obliterated in many sections and there was a general slowing down of business and traffic in the storm-swept area.

While such storms are practically the same as those experienced fifty and one hundred years ago, the effects are very different now from what they were then. In the old days most of the traveling was done with teams, and when the roads were blocked the people accepted the situation as a matter of course and contented themselves as best they could until they could dig out.

But conditions are very different today. The world it might be said, now moves on wheels. In getting from one place to another the great majority of the people depend upon the railroads, the trolley lines and the automobile, and when for any reason the wheels stop turning there is trouble. For these reasons such a storm as that of last week means more than it did in the days of old. It means not only serious interruption of traffic, but tremendous costs to transportation companies, which in addition to losses of business are obliged to expend great sums in restoring conditions to normal, and after the money is all spent there is not a thing to show for it. They are no better off than they were before.

Nevertheless, this is one of the conditions of life for which there is no remedy. We cannot control the weather, no matter how much we talk about it, and our only recourse is to "take it as it comes," as we are so often reminded that we must, and make the best of it.

The expenditure of $120,000 on the county buildings at Auburn, Me., has been postponed on account of the "excessive cost of materials and labor." If such action were to become general it might do more toward bringing down prices than all the talk that is being indulged in.

Blandford, a little mountain town in Massachusetts, is talking of creating a subsidy to induce a physician to locate there. In the larger towns the people who employ the doctors have to do the "subsidizing."

The pins continue to be knocked from under the mourners of John Barleycorn. The Supreme Court of Colorado decides that the ratification of the prohibition amendment by the Legislature without a referendum vote was strictly legal.

But there is no law against the use of the old terms, as is instanced by a certain brand of ginger ale that is advertised as "aged and mellowed." Yum, yum.

Secretary Glass wants $2,000,000 with which to prevent the smuggling of liquor into the country. Why not use the funds that have been necessary in running the jails, which are said to be rapidly going out of business?

It is reported from Washington that rural mail carriers are resigning in considerable numbers because of insufficient pay, and the claim is made that they are not receiving as much as farm laborers. But has any one noticed a rush of these men after jobs on the farms?

Conditions are more comfortable in Boston, now that the freight handlers have gone back to work. May the time soon come when an armistice will be declared in the industrial war.

Is spunky little Rhode Island preparing to give up the ghost? One of the biggest breweries in the state is preparing to convert itself into a refinery of sugars and syrups.

THE HERALD'S ESSAY SCHOOL CONTEST

The Army School Essay Contest, which takes place on February 20th, in all the schools of the United States on the subject, "What Are the Benefits of an Enlistment in the United States Army," has aroused such nation-wide interest, that thousands of letters are being received at Washington and New York, requesting information on the subject.

Due to the short length of time before the contest takes place all pupils, their parents or teachers who desire information of any kind about the Essay Contest should address their inquiries to U. S. Army Recruiting Station, 403 Congress Street, Portland, Maine, where the army officials will be delighted to furnish all information requested.

JUNIOR CIRCLE MEETING AND SOCIAL

The Junior King's Daughters of the Baptist church held a meeting on Monday evening in the chapel, Mrs. James O. Pettigrew, the leader, presiding. A business session was held and it was planned to give a Silver Tea on Thursday afternoon from three to five o'clock in the chapel. The Junior order throughout the state adopted a French friar and some time ago each circle pledged a sum of money toward its support. The Juniors received an invitation from the Sunday school class of Sydney Road for a Washington's Birthday party in the chapel on Feb. 23. Following the business session a treat of pop, corn, brittle and chocolate was served and music and games occupied the remainder of the evening.

The Junior Circle is called the King's Daughters and it has done commendable work for such a young organization since it was started. At Christmas it presented a very pretty gift to the Children's Home at Nashua, this having been made by the members of this Circle.

Its officers are as follows:
President—Ruth Yeaton.
Vice president—Ruth Emery.
Secretary—Vesta Spilney.
Treasurer—Madeline Wesscheff.

THE HERALD HEARS

That a diver has completed his examination of the Portsmouth and Kittery bridge foundation.

That if the delegation that partakes of the noon day meal in one of the local restaurants, cannot settle the matter of the bill, it can't be done.

That a lot of men credited with having an eye for the woman, often lose that credit when they are comfortably seated in a crowded car.

That it looks like a prosperous season for the junk man later.

That it costs something to be sleek—my guess hospital rates once more!

That in the sunny kitchen of her home beside the Portsmouth road, near Ogunquit, Mrs. Hannah J. Perkins, 93 years, sits in her deep, old-fashioned rocking chair and all day long cuts and sews on her brilliantly-hued patchwork, threading the finest needles and cutting the patches with geometrical precision, without the aid of glasses.

That the clam flats are covered up with thick ice and the market is getting shy of the product.

That the man who cuts the thin slices of ham and other meats which make up sandwiches these days must have done a lot of practicing in his life. He's some artist.

That some of the old familiar breaths are missing since January 16.

NAVY YARD NOTES

Going to West Coast
The cutter Jason is scheduled to take a cargo of supplies from the Charlestown yard to the west coast for the Pacific fleet.

Must Be Careful
The department has sent out letters to the yards and stations in regard to the handling of gasoline. The letter says on account of the recent frequent explosions and fires on submarine chasers it is believed that the hazards on board all vessels using gasoline are not sufficiently understood and requesting that special notice be paid to the letters that have been sent out on the subject.

Opening Game Tonight
The opening game in the series of basketball games between different ships and marines will be played in the Portsmouth armory beginning tonight at 7.30. The Huntington will meet the Striding and the marine barracks will have it out with the Eagle boat No. 46. The Gridley and Eagle No. 2 make up the other teams to take part in the series covering a period of seven weeks.

Still at Large

No trace of the three men who escaped from the Charlestown yard brig on Friday last has been discovered. The yard officers got several tips on the men but nothing came of any of them.

Two More Deaths

Two more deaths from influenza among the enlisted men occurred at the local yard hospital early this morning. The deceased are C. W. Pratt, a fireman on the destroyer Isaac, and R. F. Ludwell, fireman, attached to the destroyer Fairfax.

Will Move to Washington

The navy food inspection office which has been located at Chicago during the war, will be transferred on March 1 to the Bureau of Animal Industry, Department of Agriculture, at Washington.

LINCOLNISM VS. BOLSHEVISM

(By Associated Press)
Lincoln's Birth Day, Thursday, will have a larger significance than any other anniversary of February 12 in the 111 years since he was born.

The Lincoln club of this city made a suggestion that in Lincoln's life is found the most powerful antidote for the poison of Bolshevism. And so it was urged that the states call special attention to Lincoln and what he stood for.

That thought has grown into an important movement, according to W. J. Connel, a former president of the Lincoln club. The governors of ten states have wired their endorsement of the plan and promised to issue special proclamations accordingly.

And states are Arizona, New Mexico, Indiana, Rhode Island, Idaho, Wisconsin, Kentucky, Colorado, Wyoming and West Virginia.

Most people will agree that Lincoln was not only America's in the world's foremost Commander. He rose from a lower to a higher plane by the magic of his own industry and supreme talents.

Nobody now has a new story of Lincoln. Every one has been told. But a lawyer who ranks with the best of admiralty attorneys tells a curious thing about Lincoln as a lawyer.

He was an inland attorney—a fresh water member of the Illinois bar. Yet Lincoln argued an admiralty case, which the Philadelphia lawyer says is one of the American classics in that branch of law.

No, indeed, Bolshevism cannot start before the flag of all American pictures—the boy Lincoln lying on the bare floor before the blazing pipe stove on the hearth, reading his couple of books so that he could be ready when his time came.

3 LOSE LIVES IN MERRIMAC

Boat Overturned in Strong Current.

(By Associated Press)

Manchester, N. H., Feb. 10.—Two men and one woman were drowned here this morning in attempting to cross the partly frozen Merrimack river in South Manchester by boat, breaking the ice ahead of them with a pole. A fourth occupant of the boat was saved when he managed to cling to the boat, clung by the strong current. The four were brothers and sisters, Daniel, Thomas Jr., Nellie and John Stewart. Who lived at 577 South Main St., West Manchester. John Stewart who was rescued was breaking the ice when the accident occurred, the water running through a channel at that point very swiftly, preventing the river from freezing over, entirely except in extremely cold weather. The party was on the way to their work at the W. H. McElwain Shoe Co., Central plant, on the East side of the river. There being no bridge in the southern part of the city, it has been common practice for many of the McElwain workers to thus cross the river to their work each day. The Stewart brothers came from a large family and four of them including the three in the accident today, served manfully with the American and British forces during the war.

CHARACTER BUILDING IN U. S. A.

To the man who enters the United States army the question immediately arises—Who will my associates be and what will we do to amuse ourselves in our leisure time?

Like the youth who enters a preparatory school or college, a stranger, a recruit in the army must choose his friends and define a policy himself. He is confronted, in all probability by youths on the one side, who can see no other way of spending their leisure than to go to town and either walk the streets or seek out a public dance or theatre to attend. On the other hand his acquaintances will number among them, the type of youth who prefers to spend his evenings and his week-end in writing letters to beloved ones at home, or in reading.

The U. S. army bends every effort to induce our soldiers to build and to shape their ideals in accordance with the principles of the youth mentioned in the second class above. To further these ideals all available opportunities are put before the men to let their minds and thoughts be guided into such clear and fruitful channels.

That men may not lack spiritual guidance, a chaplain's corps has been formed, with chaplains of all denominations in each regimental or corresponding organization. Their functions include holding services of Sabbath, assisting as instructors in our schools, and in giving advice to the men on all personal subjects.

BOLSHEVIKI STOPPED BY WARSHIPS

(By Associated Press)

London, Feb. 10.—Referring to the situation at Odessa a Bolshevik communiqué received by wireless from Moscow says, "In Odessa our troops were stopped temporarily by the fire of warships and artillery which was particularly fierce in the streets. Armored cars were used and field artillery fired point blank. The enemy was finally driven from the town, on Sunday."

GERMANY NAMES ALLIED VIOLATORS

(By Associated Press)

Berlin, Feb. 10.—Germany is publishing a list containing the names of allied soldiers and high officials who are accused by the Berlin government of violation of the laws of war and plans to submit it as a counter proposal to the demands of the allies for extradition of Germans who are alleged to be war criminals. This list is in the course of compilation and it is expected it will be ready for publication and delivery shortly. It will contain specific indictments based upon alleged authenticated material which is on file in the German archives. It was stated tonight Germany, however, would not demand extradition of the men named in these indictments.
